MENTORSHIP EXPERIENCE

---

Mary Chege

October 2023 – Present

Mary is a graduate student jointly affiliated with the Akinyi Lab at the University of Nairobi, Kenya, and the Archie Lab at the University of Notre Dame, US. Her research focuses on characterizing the gut microbiome and eukaryotic communities of wild baboons in the Amboseli ecosystem. She also investigates patterns of antimicrobial resistance gene transmission both within baboon social groups and between baboons and livestock.

Tess Brunnen

June 2024 – Present

Tess is a graduate student in the Blekhman Lab at the University of Chicago. She has characterized the breast milk microbiome and metabolome, examining their relationship to infant gut microbiome composition. She is currently studying microbiome signatures associated with Pseudomonas aeruginosa infection in the hospital setting.

JJ Colgan

February 2024 – Present

JJ is a graduate student in the Blekhman Lab at the University of Chicago. His research focuses on characterizing the microbiome of non-Westernized human communities, with particular emphasis on populations affected by konzo, an irreversible paralytic disease. He is reconstructing metagenome-assembled genomes (MAGs) to identify previously uncharacterized members of the gut microbiome in these communities and to investigate patterns of strain sharing across villages.

Mattea Allert

February 2023 – December 2024

Mattea worked with me as a graduate student in the Blekhman Lab at the University of Minnesota, where she investigated the composition and functional characteristics of the human breast milk microbiome. She is now a postdoctoral scholar at the University of Minnesota.

Askarbek Orakov

October 2020 – June 2022

Askarbek completed his graduate studies in the Bork Lab at EMBL Heidelberg, where he conducted a meta-analysis of microbiome composition associated with the presence of Fusobacterium species, a clinically relevant bacterial clade. He is currently a postdoctoral scholar in the Huttenhower Lab at Harvard University.
